

DIANE W. BALL

Diane W. Ball has worked as an educator at elementary, middle, and high school levels and been a member of leadership teams and a workshop facilitator in public school systems in California, Arizona, and New York.

A CHARACTER COUNTS! national faculty member and graduate of Josephson Institute's Ethics in the Workplace training program, Ball has also worked as a character-education consultant for the City of Santa Clarita, California, interacting with city government, faith communities, nonprofits, businesses, schools, and police and fire departments.

After relocating to Arizona, she served as an education program specialist for the Character Education and Development Department of the Arizona Department of Education. Currently, she's the character advisor and reading coach for the Gila Bend Unified School District.

Ball holds a master's degree in Teaching from Fordham University and a bachelor's degree from Lake Erie College.